Special Fellowship.

A fellowship in Journalism of the value of $400 a year was established by the Alumni association of the University of Wisconsin for the ensuing year at the annual meeting of the organization. The fellow in Journalism who is to be nominated by the executive committee of the association is to be a college graduate, and will assist in editing the Alumni magazine. The funds for the fellowship were given by an alumna who did not desire his name to be known.

Board of Visitors.

In order to bring about closer cooperation between the alumni and the regents, in the management of the university, the regents requested the Alumni association to appoint five alumni as members of the board of visitors of the university, and the association chose Mrs. Charles H. Carpenter, '87, Racine; J. G. Wray, '93, Chicago; Charles L. Brigham, '86, Blue Mounds; Thomas R. Floyd-Jones, '90, Watkinson; Beverly L. Worden, '93, Milwaukee.

Elected Officers.

The officers of the Alumni association elected for the ensuing year were: President, Dr. A. J. Dehner, '84, Chicago; Vice-president, Miss Elizabeth Waters, '85, Fond du Lac; Recording secretary, W. G. Hoyer, '96, Madison; Members of the executive committee, Judge R. G. Shebeck, '78, Madison; Dr. T. L. Harrington, '90, Milwaukee; and Charles N. Brown, '81, Madison.

Elected Members.

T. E. Hittingham of Madison, donor of the Lincoln statue, and Richard Lloyd Jones, ex-'97, New York, were elected honorary members of the association.

The sixty advisory committee consisting of 300 alumni who have been visiting the university this year, were continued for another year.

Gives New Ideas.

In his commencement address to the graduating class of the University of Wisconsin this morning, previous to the conferring of over 570 degrees, the largest number in the history of the institution, President Charles C. Van Hise presented a new ideal to the students, that of individualism surrendered to collectivism for the good of the race. He pointed to the trend of the first decade of this century, expressed in a host of remedial laws—primary election, initiative and referendum, the recall, the commission form of government for cities, and state and national public utility laws—the direct outgrowth of a realization of the limitation of the country's natural resources and of the fact of the private possession of those resources.

Campaign of Education Necessary.

"We must fully realize that a mighty campaign of education far greater than was ever undertaken with reference to any other ideal, even greater than that with reference to slavery, will be necessary to change the point of view of the people from individualism to collectivism," said President Van Hise.

"Only under conditions which will permit of the education of each man for his own benefit will it be possible to go only under conditions which will give each an opportunity to rise, will this new era of remedial legislation be safely guided.

"Without the widest and wisest system of education the poor will be led by impulse and not by reason. Without the widest and wisest system of education, those who have large possessions will continue to be controlled by individualism as are the small group of men who own the anthracite coal of the country.

Legislation Cannot Be Stopped.

"By some men of large possessions I have been asked if the new movement of restrictive legislation is not merely a temporary flood which will soon subside. To such I have said the tide is just beginning to run; the part of wisdom is to cooperate, to be fair to this generation and to consider to the generations to come, or you will be overwhelmed by a mighty tidal wave of misbegotten legislation, passion, and prejudice.

Individualism Is Past.

"The eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, during which the resources of the continent were being taken possession of, were naturally times of intense individualism. It was natural that the resources of the nation should be given freely to any individual or corporation that could exploit them. That this opportunity was taken advantage of by men of large ability, many of whom in consequence have accumulated gigantic fortunes, was entirely natural. Many of us, had we had the ability and the opportunity, would have done likewise.

"But the private possession of our resources has placed a new situation before us and demands of the twentieth century different ideals from those that obtained in the past. Now it is demanded that every citizen shall surrender his individualism, not for four years, but for life—that he shall not think only of himself and of his family, but of his neighbors and especially of the unnumbered generations that are to follow. When this criterion is accepted by the people, no individual or group of individuals can permanently retard progress."

Or, They Should.

CAR THIEVES DID NOT LIKE PLUNDER OBTAINED

Last night at the new yards a freight-car was opened by unknown parties, supposedly tramps, who carried off a box containing perfumes, extracts and horse-conditioning powders, and after dragging their haul into the Ingalls pasture opened it and scattered its contents. In evidence of the inappropriateness of their plunder, the box was shipped by William Bros. of Edgerton to the Sanger Bros. of Sterling, Ill.

Start the Day Right and you will be right. Start it by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit with hot milk or cream and a little fruit. If you eat more than the stomach needs you are wasting both money and strength. Overtaxing the stomach impairs digestion, weakens brain power and lays the foundation for disease. Cut out heavy meats and soggy white flour pastries for ten days, eat Shredded Wheat and see how much better you will feel—then tell your friends about it. Your grocer sells it.

Shredded Wheat is made of the choicest selected white wheat, cleaned, steam-cooked and baked. Try it for breakfast to-morrow with milk or cream. The Biscuit is also delicious for any meal in combination with fresh or preserved fruits.

CELEBRATION IS TO BE GOOD ONE

CHAIRMAN WORTENDYKE SAYS
ITS SUCCESS IS ASSURED.

MORE MONEY IS NEEDED

Additional List Will be Placed For General Public Today—Nonesuch
Bros.—Circus Committee to Meet Tonight.

"I believe I am safe in saying that this year's celebration of the Fourth will be most successful," said L. F. Wortendyke, chairman of the executive committee of the celebration this morning. "The chairman of all the various committees in charge of the coming Fourth of July celebration met Monday night to perfect their plans."

"It was the general opinion that in view of the large number of people who expect old friends to be with them at this time and the interest many of them have expressed in the celebration that they would appreciate the opportunity to contribute toward the expenses incurred."

"It is impossible for the finance committee to see all these people so it was decided to place a list in each drug store and also in the cigar stores of O. E. Meyer, 134, Connell and Löffelholz & Hockett."

"We want to make the coming celebration the best ever held in Janesville and that means an expenditure of about $2000."

"We need your support and feel confident that it only needs a proper presentation of the matter to secure it, so kindly leave at the most convenient of the above places what you feel willing to give to the celebration."

"The Finance Committee having in charge the raising of the needed funds for the coming celebration on July 5th were much pleased today to be handed twenty-five dollars from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. It is hoped this is an example other societies will strive to follow."

"Prizes must be given for various parts of the entertainment and if the societies would donate these prizes it would greatly add to their intrinsic value."

"Colonel George McKee, who under ordinary circumstances is merely a 'Commodore' announces that the parade of the famous Nonesuch Bros., citizens this year is going to be bigger, better and greater than ever. 'It is going to be the finest thing ever seen in Janesville,' said 'Col.' McKee this morning. 'What I want will be furnished by the people who will furnish us with teams to haul and huge cages of wild and tame animals through the streets. If those willing to donate a team for this purpose will notify me I will be much gratified.'

"I would also like to hear from all who will take part in the parade. They can either notify me or some member of the committee. Already I have a big list of attractions and we do not want 'struts' duplicated if it is possible to prevent it. By the way, there are some corking good acts coming off that day. Acts that will surprise the public generally and be well worth the time spent in getting them equipped and when the parade starts it is going to be the biggest and best that ever came down the streets of Janesville."

"This evening at seven-thirty I would like to meet with all the members of the Nonesuch Bros. circus committee at Chas. Putnam's store on South Main street. This meeting is important and we wish every member of the committee would make it an especial effort to be present. There are many matters of importance to be discussed and a full attendance is desired."

Chairman McNamara of the music committee reports that at least five hands will furnish the music for the day and more if they can be obtained. The chairman of the other committees also report progress and state that the features of both the morning and afternoon parades, decorations, automobile division and street performances will be the best ever seen in Janesville.

FOURTH DANCE AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Was Enjoyed by About Thirty Couples
Last Evening—Several Out-of-town
Visitors Present.

About thirty partook of the excellent club supper served at the Country Club last evening and there was a large attendance at the fourth of the series of summer dancing parties. Roy Carter's orchestra provided a splendid musical program and the perfect evening was thoroughly enjoyed. Among the out-of-town visitors were: Miss Donald Seals of Birmingham, Ala., who is a guest at the home of J. L. Hostwick; Miss Mabel Corry of Toronto, Canada, who is visiting with Mrs. Louise Crowley; Miss Irma Zickler of Minneapolis, Minn.; Shepard Sheldon of Bowman, N. D.; Dakota, and George Pearson of Evanston, Ill.

Up to now today, no further word had been received regarding the projected visit of the Ridge Country club members and their ladies at the local links tomorrow. Secretary Charles Gage on Sunday wrote to the Chicago parties for particulars regarding the number who would make the trip and the probable time of arrival, but his letter has not been answered. If they come tomorrow the match play will be on the impromptu order, as no team has been selected to meet them. The ladies of the Country Club will enjoy their weekly bridge whilst tournament Friday afternoon.

At a meeting of the directors this morning a motion to purchase a steel tank and install the same on a wagon for the purpose of watering the grounds was passed through. A resolution was passed requiring that all balls picked up on the grounds be restored to owners and that members be forbidden to purchase balls of caddies. Dr. Fletcher and Percy Munger were admitted to the club as honorary members.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS PICNIC AT YOST'S

G. A. R. and W. R. C. of Janesville
And Beloit Spent Enjoyable Day
At Down-River Resort.

Members of the W. R. C. of Janesville and Beloit, and their auxiliary, the Woman's Relief Corps, enjoyed themselves to their utmost capacity at the picnic held at Yost's today. The party composed of the members of the two organizations and friends, accompanied by the Drum Corps, went down to the park in a trailer attached to the car leaving the suburban station at 9:15. At ten o'clock they assembled at the park with the Beloit corps and the rest of the time until the dinner call sounded was spent socially. Following a sumptuous and hearty repast, the Drum Corps played several times popular with the old soldiers. The invocation was by Rev. and Comrade W. F. Brown of Beloit. All united in singing "Marching Through Georgia," and though the singing may not have been entirely in harmony, what it lacked in that line was more than made up for by the enthusiasm and spirit which were put into it. One of the guests of honor at the picnic was Mrs. Juliet Morris, department president of the W. R. C., who delivered a short address on her occasion. Her talk was followed by speeches by Mrs. Glenn, president of the Janesville W. R. C.; Rev. Brown, Chaplain of the Beloit G. A. R.; P. Norcross, past department commander of the G. A. R. of Janesville; and an eloquent address given by the department commander of the G. A. R. of Wisconsin. Following this "American" was sung and the rest of the program of the day was devoted to sports and games as follows:

4:30—Flag of war, W. R. C. Beloit vs. Janesville.

Flag of war, G. A. R., Beloit vs. Janesville.

Foot race, W. R. C., Beloit vs. Janesville.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY A SEVERE STORM

Brodhead, Hanover, Orderville and Villages to West of City Suffer From Wind Yesterday.

Word from Brodhead this morning announces that at half past four yesterday afternoon that city was visited by a severe wind and rain storm. The residence of Jacob Bush, on the south side of the city, was struck by lightning, a small house blown down and Mrs. Bush is suffering from the effects of the shock.

A mile and a half from Hanover a large hay barn belonging to a man named Schrader was blown across the main line of the Wisconsin Telephone company running to Dubuque and eleven poles were snapped off. At Orderville trees were uprooted and other damage done. Footville was also in the zone of trouble and trees and buildings in the immediate vicinity were partially destroyed by the fury of the wind.

At Leyden and Evansville a severe storm is also reported, huge trees being uprooted and other damage done, but it was not so severe as it was further to the southwest.

Attention G. A. R.
All members of W. R. C. Sargent Post No. 20, G. A. R., are requested to meet at Post hall, Friday, June 25, at 8:30 a. m., to attend the funeral of Comrade Michael O'Brien.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"My dear, I'm afraid I've bored you terribly. I've been chattering on about my work to a disgraceful extent," says the visiting lady.

"Never mind," you answer consolingly, "so have I."

Now that's not at all what she wanted you to say. It simply reassured you without exonerating her. For all you know she may have thought you very stupid and been much horrified to think she was no better.

What you should have said if you really wished to be consoling was, "But your work is so interesting."

"That's a fair example of the habit a good many people have of referring all conversation back to themselves."

It's not an uncommon habit. On the contrary unless anyone possesses it to an alarming degree it's not noticeable.

It brings its possessor into prominence only through its absence.

When you say "What a sweet disposition she has," or "What an interest she takes in other people's troubles," of some friend, you are frequently commending her freedom from this habit.

She is the sort of person who, when you say, "I love horseback riding," draws you out by saying, "It is a healthy exercise. Where do you ride?" instead of closing up the subject by remarking flippantly, "I don't. It disagrees with me."

Women are greater victims of this personalizing habit than men, not because they are more selfish—I hardly need to defend them from that indictment—but because they are usually more personal. They find it harder to judge or think of things out of their relation to themselves than men do.

I have often known men who could say of an enemy or a rival, "I admire him," but seldom a woman.

Men can be decent enemies in business and warm friends personally. Women, as a rule, can't.

"I'm not so intensely personal as all that," I can hear you saying to yourself as you read this.

Listen, lady.

"The trouble with you women," a man said to me the other day, "is that you never can talk generalization. You always apply everything to yourself."

"Why, I never do," I responded promptly.

And that, when I stopped to think it over, was what made me write this Chit-Chat.

ROOTS, HERBS AND BARKS.

You can no doubt, recall the collection of roots, herbs and barks your grandmother made every fall for the family medicine chest.

It is interesting to note that the most successful remedy for female ills had its origin more than 30 years ago in one of these home medicine chests, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made today in immense quantities from these same roots and herbs with extreme accuracy, care and cleanliness.

LIEUT. RAYMOND S. BANBERGER, GOVERNMENT BALLOON EXPERT.

Washington, D. C.—The United States is rapidly waking up to the necessities of aerial navigation as a means of defense in an attack and the balloon is an important part of this service. Lieut. Raymond S. Banberger has just been commissioned by the government to make reconnaissance and every day when the weather permits his ascensions are viewed by hundreds of people.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Jamesville Daily Gazette, June 23, 1869.—On Monday a young man calling himself Charles J.avenport, who had been boarding a short time with Mr. Aboller on Main street, left very suddenly taking with him as a memento, money and clothing, amounting in all to $500.

Off to Madison.—The Concordia of this city whose fine singing at their hall across from our office for the past few evenings has been a source of pleasure, have gone to Madison today to attend the Stangebund festival, which is to consist of three grand concerts, a grand procession, a ball at Turner's hall, and a picnic in Sonner's woods. With the flower City men at their head, and with their beautiful banner flying, they marched to the depot attracting general attention. They return on Saturday. We wish them a happy time.

Entertaining.—We learn that the young people connected with the Bath School of the Congregational church have made arrangements with the trustees of the church for a strawberry and ice cream festival, on Friday evening of this week, and that the trustees have consented to throw open the large and beautiful audience room of their new church for that purpose. It is said that the "frosching" and "grubbing" now jobs will be completed and the staging taken down and the building cleaned out and the whole great edifice will be thrown open for everybody to go and enjoy the festivities of the occasion. We are desirous to announce that both the Flower City Band and Mitchell's Orchestra will be present and disconcert some of their elegant and stirring music.

More Nicolson Pavement.—It was agreed last evening by the Council (although somewhat informal) for the aldermen of the Second and Third wards to take the necessary steps to have that portion of East Milwaukee street between Main and the bridge, paved with Nicolson pavement.

FIRST MORTGAGE 6% SERIAL GOLD BONDS

OF THE

of International Falls, Minn., and Ft. Frances, Ont.

These bonds are dated October 1st, 1908, and are payable in annual series from 1913 to 1928, inclusive. They are coupon bonds of $1,000 and $500 each, with privilege of registration as to principal, and are payable at the First National Bank of Chicago, and the First National Bank of New York. The security behind these bonds comprises 30,000 net continuous Water Horse-Powers, electrical equipment, and pulp and paper mills, now in course of construction, and conservatively valued at $8,000,000. The net earnings of the Company are estimated at over $1,000,000 per annum. The bonds are guaranteed by the actual endorsement on each bond of the Backus-Brooks Company of Minneapolis, one of the largest lumber operators in the North-West, with a record of twenty-four years of successful history, net assets of $5,000,000, no mortgage debt, and an earning capacity of $300,000 a year. We have sold $2,000,000 of these bonds, and now offer the unsold balance in a wide range of maturities at par and accrued interest to net 6%.

Boys' Reasoning.
 A boy once inquired why leaves of tables were so called, since they did not resemble leaves in the least. Not having received a satisfactory answer he thought for some time and then said: "I think I know now and they're called leaves, because you can have them up or leave them down."

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"I am afraid," he concluded the summary of the confabulation he had overheard at the skylight of the Althea's cabin, "you'd best make up your mind that your father—"

"Yes," whispered the girl harshly and turned her face to the window, a quivering muscle in the firm young throat alone betraying her emotion. "It's a bad business," he pursued relentlessly—"and, all round. Mulready, in your father's pay, tries to have him arrested, the better to rob him. Mrs. Hallam, to secure your property for that precious pet, Freddie, conspires at it she doesn't indicate a kidnapping. Your father takes her money to deprive you of yours, which could profit him nothing so long as you remained in lawful possession of it, and at the same time he conspires to rob, through you, the rightful owners, if they are, why should Freddie Hallam go like a thief in the night to secure property that's his beyond dispute? I don't really think you owe your father any further consideration."

He waited patiently. Eventually "No," the girl sobbed assent. "It's this way: Calendar, counting on your sparing him in the end, is going to hand us. He's doing it now. There's Hobbs in the next car, for proof. Until these jewels are returned, whether to Froggall street or to young Hallam, we're both in danger, both thieves in the sight of the law. And your father knows that too. There's no profit to be had by discounting the temper of these people. They're as desperate a gang of swindlers as ever lived. They'll have those jewels if they have to go as far as murder—"

"Mr. Kirkwood," she deprecated in horror.

He wagged his head stubbornly, omnisciently. "I've seen them in the raw. They're hot on our trail now. Ten to one they'll be on our backs before we can get across the channel. Once in England we will be comparatively safe. Until then—but I'm a brute—I'm frightening you!"

"You are, dreadfully," she confessed in a tremulous voice. "Forgive me. If you look at the dark side first, the other seems all the brighter. Please don't worry. We'll pull through with flying colors or my name's not Philip Kirkwood."

"I have every faith in you," she affirmed him, flawlessly sincere. "When I think of all you've done and dared for me, on the mere suspicion that I needed your help—"

"We'd best be getting ready," he interrupted hastily. "Here's Brussels."

It was so. Lights in little clusters and long, wheeling lines, were leaping out of the darkness and flashing back as the train rumbled through the suburbs of the little Paris of the north. Already the other passengers were bestirring themselves, gathering together wraps and hand luggage and preparing for the journey's end.

Rising, Kirkwood took down their two suitcases from the overhead rack and waited, in grim abstraction planing and counter planning against the machinations in whose wiles they two had become so perilously entangled.

Primarily there was Hobbs to be dealt with—no easy task, for Kirkwood dared not resort to violence nor in any way invite the attention of the authorities, and threats would be an idle waste of breath in the case of that corrupt and malignant little cockney, himself as keen as any needle, adept in all the artful resources of the underworld whence he had sprung, and further primed for action by that master rogue, Calendar.

The train was pulling slowly into the station when he reluctantly abandoned his latest unfeasible scheme for shaking off the little Englishman and concluded that their salvation was only to be worked out through everlasting vigilance, incessant movement and the favor of the blind goddess Fortune.

He saw nothing of Hobbs as they alighted and hastened from the station and hardly had time to waste looking for him since their train had failed to make up the previous ten minutes. Consequently "he" haunted the fellow from his thoughts until— with Brussels lingering in their memories a garish vision of brilliant streets and glowing cafes, glimpsed furtively from their cab windows during its wild dash over the broad city boulevards—at midnight they settled themselves in a carriage of the Bruges express. They were speeding along through the open country with a noisy clatter; then a minute's investigation sufficed to discover the into of the Althea's solemnly ensconced in the coach behind.

The little man seemed rarely complacent and impudently greeted Kirkwood's scowling visage as the latter peered through the window in the coach door, with a snarl and a vaguish wave of his hand. The American by main strength of will power mastered an impulse to enter and wring his neck and returned to the girl more disturbed than he cared to let her know.

There resulted from his review of the case but one plan for outwitting Mr. Hobbs, and that lay in trusting to his confidence that Kirkwood and Dorothy Calendar would proceed as far toward Ostend as the train would take them—namely, to the limit of the run, Bruges.

Thus inspired, Kirkwood took counsel with the girl, and when the train paused at Ghent they made an unobtrusive exit from their coach, finding themselves when the express had rolled on into the west upon a station platform in a foreign city at nine minutes past 1 o'clock in the morning, but at length without their shadow. Mr. Hobbs had gone on to Bruges.

Kirkwood sped his journeyings with an unspoken malediction and collected himself to cope with a situation which was to prove hardly more happy for them than the espionage they had just eluded. The primal flush of triumph which had saturated the American's humor on this signal success proved but fleetive and transitory when inquiry of the station attendants elicited the information that the two earliest trains to be obtained were the 5:30 for Dunkerque and the 6:37 for Ostend. A minimum delay of four hours was to be endured in the face of many contingent features singularly unpleasant to contemplate. The station waiting for him was on the point of closing for the night, and Kirkwood, alarmed by the rapid ebb of the money he had taken from Calendar, dared not subject his finances to the strain of a night's lodging at one of Ghent's hotels. He found himself forced to be cruel to the girl, and Dorothy's cheerful negligence to their sole alternative of tramping the street until daybreak did nothing to alleviate Kirkwood's exasperation.

It was permitted them to occupy a bench outside the station. There the girl, her head pillowed on the treasure bag, napped uneasily, while Kirkwood plodded restlessly to and fro, up and down the platform, adding his poor, weary wile with the problem of the future—not so much his own as the future of the unhappy child for whose welfare he had assumed responsibility. Dark for both of them, in his understanding tomorrow loomed darkest for her.

Not until the gray, formless light of the dawn dusk was wavering over the land did he cease his perambulations. Then a gradual stir of life in the city streets, together with the appearance of a station porter or two, opening the waiting rooms and preparing them against the traffic of the day, warned him that he must rouse his charge. He paused and stood over her, reluctant to disturb her rest, such as it was, his heart torn with compassion for her, his soul inflamed by the cruel irony of their estate.

If what he understood were true, a king's ransom was secreted within the cheap imitation leather satchel which served her for a pillow. But it availed her nothing for her comfort. If what he believed were true, she was also mistress of that treasure of jewels, yet that night she had been forced to sleep on a hard, unyielding bench in the open air, and this morning he must waken her to the life of a hunted thing. A week ago she had had at her command every luxury known to the civilized world; today she was friendless but for his ineffectual, worthless self and in a strange land.

A week ago, had he known her then, he had been free to tell her of his love, to offer her the protection of his name as well as his devotion; today he was an all but penniless vagabond and there could be no dissonance deeper than to let her know the nature of his heart's desire.

Was ever lover hedged from a declaration to his mistress by circumstances so hateful, so untoward? He could have raged and railed against his fate like any madman, for he desired her greatly, and she was very lovely in his sight. She was to him all created things the most wonderful, the most desirable.

The temptation of his longing seemed more than he could long withstand. But roset he must or part forever with his title to her consideration—or his own. He shut his teeth and knotted his brows in a transport of desire to touch, if only with his finger tips, the woven wonder of her hair.

And thus she saw him when, without warning, she awoke. David'silverment at first informed the wide brown eyes, then, as their greenness vanished, a little laughter, a little tender mirth. "Good morning, Sir Knight of the Sombre Countenance," she cried, standing up. "Am I so utterly disagreeable that you find it necessary to frown on me so darkly?"

He shook his head, smiling. "I know I'm a fright," she asserted, vigorously shaking out the folds of her plaited skirt. "And, as for my hat, it will never be on straight; but, then, you wouldn't know."

"It seems all right," he replied vacantly.

"Then please to try to look a little happier since you find me quite presentable."

"I do."

Without lifting her bended head she looked up, laughing, not ill pleased. "You'd say so readily?"

Far down the railway tracks there rose a murmuring that waxed to a rumbling roar. A passing porter answered Kirkwood's inquiry: it was the night boat train from Ostend. He picked up their bags and drew the girl into the waiting room, troubled by a sickening foreboding.

Through the window they watched the train roll in and stop.

Among others alighted, smiling, the unspeakable Hobbs.

He lifted his hat and bowed faintly to the waiting room window, making it plain that his keen eyes had discovered them instantly.

CHAPTER XXVI.

KIRKWOOD'S heart sank with the hopelessness of it all. If the railway directorates of Europe conspired against them, what chance had they? If the night boat train from Ostend had only had the decency to be twenty-five minutes late, instead of arriving promptly on the minute of 4:45, they two might have escaped by the 5:30 for Dunkerque and Ostend.

"Miss Calendar," said Kirkwood from his berth, "just as soon as I get you home safe and sound I am going to take a day off, hunt up that little villain and lay him alive. In the meantime I forgot to dine last night and am reminded that we had better forage for breakfast."

Hobbs dogged them at a safe distance while they sallied forth and in a neighboring street discovered an early bird bakery. Here they were able to purchase rolls steaming from the oven, fresh pats of golden butter wrapped in clean lettuce leaves and milk in twin bottles, all of which they prosaically carried with them back to the station, lacking leisure as they did to partake of the food before train time.

Without attempting concealment (Hobbs, he knew, was enveloping round the corner of the door) Kirkwood purchased at the Dunkerque train. Mr. Hobbs promptly flattered him by imitation, and so jealous of his luck was Kirkwood by this time grown through continual disappointment that he did not even let the girl into his plans until they were aboard the 5:30 in a compartment all to themselves. Then, having with his own eyes seen Mr. Hobbs dodge into the third compartment in the rear of the same carriage, Kirkwood astonished the girl by requesting her to follow him, and together they left by the door opposite that by which they had entered.

The engine was raring up and down a scale of staccato snorts in preparation for the race and the cars were on the edge of moving, coupling clanking, wheels a-groan, ere Mr. Hobbs descended to join them between the tracks.

Wearily, disheartened, Kirkwood reopened the door, hung the bags in and helped the girl back into their despoiled compartment. The quicker route to England via Ostend was now out of the question. As for himself, he waited for a brace of seconds, eying wearily the ubiquitous Hobbs, who had popped back into his compartment, but stood ready to pop out again on the least encouragement. In the meantime he was pleased to shake a friendly foot at Mr. Kirkwood, thrusting that member out through the half open door.

Only the timely departure of the train, compelling him to rejoin Dorothy at once if at all, prevented the American from adding murder to the already noteworthy catalogue of his high crimes and misdemeanors.

Their simple meal, consumed to the ultimate drop and crumb while the Dunkerque train meandered serenely through a sunny, smiling Flemish countryside, somewhat revived their faded (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Mirage Seen in Scotland.

One morning recently there was a curious illusion seen at the entrance of the Firth of Forth, Scotland. It had all the appearance of an island surrounded with trees and spires, many of which seemed upside down. As viewed from Dunbar it had a lovely aspect, as it was encircled by a rainbow of abnormal proportions.—London Mail.

ODD MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Strings Played With Bow, but Horn Gives Out Sound.

Among the variety of odd musical instruments that have been recently designed by musical tinkers, one of the strangest is that shown in the illustration. This combination of horn and violin, the work of an Oklahoma man, is capable of producing tones of the weird, being blown into by the mouth of the player, and is especially effective in descriptive music. It consists of a neck and bridge like those of a violin, but the diaphragm is a little sound box leading into a huge horn. The instrument is tucked under the chin like a violin and played upon with a bow, but the sounds that emanate from the mouth of the horn would never be recognized as the notes of any member of the violin family. In the numerous musical "stunts" which have been seen on the vaudeville stage in recent years different types of violin have been much in evidence, and all sorts of shifts have been resorted to produce the mournful tones which are the characteristic of this instrument.

Roumanian Kissing Fair.

There is a sort of kissing fair held yearly in one of the provincial towns of Roumania. Upon that day, at any rate, there is free trade in kisses. This festival is held upon the feast of St. Theodore, and it is said that all the girls in the town not only allow themselves to be kissed on that day, but offer themselves for that purpose.

The Foolish Painter.

An interesting anecdote is told, on the highest authority, in connection with the little Matthew Maria picture of "The Four Mills," which realized 3,500 guineas recently. The late M. Couplé of Paris, paid the artist 100 francs for the picture, and at the same time gave him a lecture on the foolishness of painting such unobtainable stuff!

Dyspepsia is our national ailment. Burdock Blood Bitters is the national cure for it. It strengthens stomach membranes, promotes flow of digestive juices, purifies the blood, builds you up.

Reduction In Price

Labor is plentiful. Material is cheaper. Consequently we have decided to reduce the price of the Standard Hollow Concrete Building Block

In reducing the price, we have not changed the formula for making the blocks one bit. They are made according to the specifications adopted by the National Association of Block Manufacturers, and are made of better material than any other block in Southern Wisconsin.

The block has several distinct advantages. It is waterproof. It will not turn white. It is made in several different styles of faces. Its size is 8x8x24 which is another advantage. It is made "Face Down" which is also an advantage. We guarantee that it will not crack. If you are going to use a block in your building be sure to specify "Standard." You will not only get the best block on the market, but the lowest priced block as well.

WE MEAN BUSINESS

Asking for an opportunity to save you money, to give you better treatment than you have ever had, and to give quality better than you have been in the habit of getting, ought to be met with pretty prompt response, hadn't it? And yet that is exactly what we are doing in this campaign of ours. We want to let you know, that when we figure a bill of lumber we compete with every kind of competition. We bid low on all bills because our aim is to make small profits and depend upon greater volume of business. This must be the logical way of getting business, for unless our prices are lowest, based on equal quality of goods, we cannot expect the business. But there are other things to be taken into account, though price is first consideration, and they are service, credit, quality, promptness and many little courtesies. The knowledge that you can depend upon your goods being exactly as represented, can in fact see them before you buy; that you can call for more, or return some unused pieces; that your every want is going to be satisfied as soon as it is known; that you do not have to pay before getting your materials; that it is going to be delivered to you when and where you want it—in short, the knowledge that you are going to be treated as you would expect to treat us if the conditions were reversed, is worth more to you sometimes than just a slight difference in the first cost of the goods. Keep these things in mind when you buy your next order of building materials, and give us an opportunity to make an estimate of its cost, and see if we cannot save you money.
